What is a CDIA+?

A CDIA+ (Certified Document Imaging Architect) is a specially trained professional who designs and implements solutions for the capture, storage, retrieval and manipulation of office documents. It is the CDIA+ who will be on the leading edge of the "paperless" society.

Earning the CompTIA CDIA+ certification means that you possess the knowledge and skills essential for designing, implementing and managing a document imaging system.

We understand document imaging and management technologies

For over twenty years Mr. Aulick has been involved with all aspects of DM/DI, from design, implementation, installation, support and maintenance. Since 1993 DataVault has provided imaging solutions to corporate and governmental agencies throughout the United States. Our focus is to provide companies with the very latest training on current technology, and our dedication is to continually update each training course to be as up to date as possible.

As well as teaching DM/DI, in 1997 DataVault opened a scanning service bureau to offer an outsource model for clients wishing to stay focused on their core competency. This has provided yet another venue for our instructors to gain up to date information from a live, real-world, operating imaging bureau.

This experience has given us the influence that now makes us known throughout the imaging industry as the expert of choice.

We have established long-term professional partnerships with other imaging vendors that compliment our services and provide us with a rich resource in which to pull from.

We understand training

Document Imaging is our specialty! We have spent countless hours providing the very best training possible in this industry to individuals that range from entry-level to professionals with many years experience seeking to obtain certification. Our passion for our discipline shows in the quality of our training. We train each of our students to come away with real-world understanding, enabling them to perform at a higher level, while feeling more comfortable with this technology.

The DataVault training specialists take the time to discuss with our clients what their training objectives are.

We understand that not all companies require the same training so we are experienced enough to identify the true need and flexible enough to accommodate all learning environments.
